LETTER FROM GOVERNOR HOLLIDAY, OF VIRGINIA—CAME PRESENTED TO GENERAL JOSEPH E. JOHNSON.

The following letter explains why Governor Holliday, of Virginia, could not remain in Nashville to witness the unveiling of the Jackson statue:
NASHVILLE, May 18, 1880.—To General John E. Wheelock, chairman Military Committee: My Dear Sir:—I have very kind regards to you and to all the members of the committee. I am sorry to be unable to be present at the unveiling of the Jackson statue on the 20th instant. I was in Richmond, I found that my engagements were such that I could not be with you on that day; but I was so anxious to attend your Exposition and to see something of your State, that I determined to stay until time I could from my engagements and official duties and visit your capital city.

I must express the great pleasure I have experienced on this trip, and the gratification I have derived from witnessing the rapid growth of the material interests, and the splendid future that awaits your people. This I have been enabled to see most favorably through the genuine kindness of citizens and friends at different points in the State, and by the numerous objects of interest collected in your most creditable and striking Exposition. The only regret I have experienced is the necessity which compels my return to Richmond before the unveiling of the statue. It is hard for me to resist the urgent request of my friends and fellow-citizens of Tennessee to remain, and nothing but necessity could have induced me to leave. I am, however, at ceremonies intended as a tribute to a man of a character so marked and a patriotism so eminent as Andrew Jackson, and whom Virginia and Virginians have always delighted so much to honor.

With much respect, yours very truly,
FRANK W. M. HOLLIDAY.
Yesterday morning upon leaving Belle Meade, where he remained during the night, General Joseph E. Johnson was presented by General W. H. Jackson with a picture of the Hermitage.

At 2 o'clock the Mexican veterans called for General Johnston at Captain Porter's residence, to carry him out to the reception at McLeese, but he declined to go on account of having to return to Washington.

Last evening a committee took carriages and repaired to the residence of Captain Porter, where an elegant gold-headed cane was presented to General Johnston by Captain Porter, and he declined to go on account of having to return to Washington.

The cane bears upon it the inscription: "TO GENERAL JOSEPH E. JOHNSON, FROM THE BOYS, NASHVILLE, 1880."

General Johnston was escorted to the train, where the committee saw him safely encoined in a sleeper bound for Atlanta; after which they then repaired to Knight & Newman's restaurant and partook of a supper. From Atlanta General Johnston will proceed to Washington.

Confederates Wanted
BY GENERAL WARREN TO TELL THE COURT OF INQUIRY THE STORY OF THE FIVE FORKS BATTLE.
New York, May 23.—The Warren Court of Inquiry met yesterday at Governor's Island after an adjournment of two days during the visit to New York of the Secretary of War, General R. M. Brinton, of Philadelphia, was recalled and cross-examined by Major Gardner relative to his statement that General Sheridan placed General Griffin in command of the Fifth Corps a short while after Ayres had carried the key to the enemy's position, and not later in the day, as General Sheridan himself has declared.

Major Langdon stated that General Warren desired to summon as witnesses the following officers of the Confederate army: Generals Fitzhugh Lee, W. H. F. Lee, Thomas J. Munford, M. D. Corse, Eppa Hunton, Samuel McGowan, Matthew Ransom, R. L. B. B. B. Wallace, and Colonel J. Mayo and W. W. Wood, and several others.

Major Gardner said he hoped that no ex-rebel officers would be summoned to testify in the little family trouble of Federal officers; he did not think it appropriate for Captain Hancock and the Court would like to know what it was intended to prove by such witnesses, and Mr. Stickney explained that it was necessary for General Warren to establish the strength of the enemy's forces at various points, and this could be done only by the officers in command.

After a consultation, General Hancock said that the Court was disposed to permit the summoning of witnesses from the other side, provided they had any essential testimony to give, and provided their number was reduced to as few as possible. Finally, summonses were issued for Munford, Corse, Mayo, and Wood.

THE SUCCESS OF THE CINCINNATI FESTIVAL.—[Special to the Chicago Times.]—The total receipts of the festival are about $52,000. The total expenses will be not far from $45,000. Campaign was paid to-night $2,800 for his services, and the good people of greenbacks were as sweet notes to him as his to the audience, and the good people were delighted. The very large sum paid in is in fulfillment of a contract to sing at each of the concerts, afternoon and evening. No other artists agreed to this severe condition. Miss Cary received $1,000, and expenses, Mr. Whitney $1,000, Miss Sherman $1,000, Miss Norton, Miss Cranch, Mr. Harvey, and Mr. Rudolph $400 each. Dudley Buck received for his $4,000 to-day, and Theodore Thomas will be paid $5,000 to-morrow for his labors as director. The expenses attached to bringing the Philharmonic orchestra from New York are $10,000, and the Cincinnati players take $3,000. The chorus singers have been paid for their privilege, like everybody else.

The close of the festival is being gaily celebrated to-night by the Musical Club in honor of the soloists.

Corse, Eppa Hunton, Samuel McGowan, Matthew Ransom, R. L. B. B. Wallace, and Colonel J. Mayo and W. W. Wood, and several others.

Major Gardner said he hoped that no ex-rebel officers would be summoned to testify in the little family trouble of Federal officers; he did not think it appropriate for Captain Hancock and the Court would like to know what it was intended to prove by such witnesses, and Mr. Stickney explained that it was necessary for General Warren to establish the strength of the enemy's forces at various points, and this could be done only by the officers in command.

After a consultation, General Hancock said that the Court was disposed to permit the summoning of witnesses from the other side, provided they had any essential testimony to give, and provided their number was reduced to as few as possible. Finally, summonses were issued for Munford, Corse, Mayo, and Wood.
